AKRON, OHIO, TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 25, 1899.

WILD WEST.

Rough Riders Here.

Every Nation of Civilized World Represented.

More Than 600 People Are With Show.

Street Parade Largest Ever Given In Akron.

Famous Bivouac Scene at San Juan Hill.

Buffalo Bill's wild west show and congress of Rough Riders of the world, arrived at Akron early Tuesday morning, and shortly afterwards had the show auditorium, living tents and stable tents all arranged on the grounds, the property of Policeman Fred Baker, on Thornton st. With the show are more than 600 people, among which are represented every nationality of the civilized world. There are also over 500 head of fine horses. Among the Indians of the show are some exceptionally fine specimens of the Sioux race.

The street parade occurred at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. It was the largest parade ever placed on the streets of Akron, being much larger than the parade given by Buffalo Bill's show when it was here several years ago. The line of parade was from the show grounds to Main st., north on Main to Howard, continuing on Howard to Market, east on Market to Main, south on Main to Thornton and then to the show grounds.

Buffalo Bill himself, driving a pair of beautiful white horses in a phaeton carriage, headed the procession. In the parade were three brass bands, including the famous cow-boy band, whose members play their instruments while riding on horses. The parade was interesting, as well as dazzling in its effects. In it rode Porto Ricans, Filipinos, Cubans, Indians, Cowboys, German, English French and American cavalry, Cossacks, Arabs, Gauchos, Mexicans, a number of Roosevelt's Rough Riders and other troops. Each brigade had a leader who rode ahead of the others and carried the colors of the nation represented in the following.

The streets were lined with people all along the line of the parade. A large crowd of out-of-town people are in the city attending the show.

The show was well attended this afternoon. The big auditorium was cool and pleasant, and excellent provision was made for the comfort of the visitors in the way of an abundant supply of ice-cold drinks of every description.

In every detail was the show pleasing and satisfactory. Everything connected with it might well be described as a feature of merit. The feats of horsemanship, fast riding, marksmanship, show battles and fights with the Indians all possessed thrilling pleasure to the spectators. Buffalo Bill is this year priding himself in his late masterpiece entitled "The Charge of San Juan Hill." This is made as nearly realistic as it is possible. The management has spared neither time or expense to make this the greatest effort of its history and has gone so far as to engage a detachment of Roosevelt's Rough Riders who were participants in this heroic event.

The famous bivouac scene, which is shown at night, is grand and abounds with realism. It shows the Rough Riders in camp the night before the famous charge. As night draws nearer taps are given to retire and then follows a tableau scene which is beyond description. This evening's show begins at 8.

Wadsworth Visitors. Wadsworth's delegation in attendance upon Buffalo Bill's show is composed of 106 persons. At least that many tickets were sold at the Erie station at Wadsworth. Then it is but natural to suppose that a large number of others came to the city in carriages and other conveyances, while many walked.

DEMON HURLEY Placed In Iron Cage at Penitentiary—His Companions.

A fresh coat of green paint was put on the door to the iron cage, painted white which has been built at the end of the east hall in the penitentiary for the "quartet of prison demons" and is the last bit of work to be done there before the four are placed in it.

The cage is more than 11 feet square and is nearly 12 feet high. It encloses five cells, and is covered with a heavy iron ceiling.

As soon as the wire screen is finished, to cover the cage front, the cage will be so fixed as to prohibit any one from slipping the smallest thing in through for the prisoners. The cage runs up above the second range of cells, but is entirely cut off from any access from the second story, of course, by a side of iron sheeting.

The floor is the hard stone one, while the north and east walls are the heavy black and stone walls of the pen. On the whole the cage for the "demons" is a most gruesome and unwelcome place for such as Hurley, Marlett, Atkinson and O'Neill, who compose the unruly four, the latter two being those who slew Guard Landerbaugh.

These prisoners were put in the iron cage Tuesday morning.

We are closing out our stock of hammocks at greatly reduced prices. M. O'Neill & Co.

Team Purchased. John Dellenberger has bought the fine sorrel geldings from N. R. Steiner, for $800. This is one of the finest teams in the city.

Heavyweight Problem. The heavyweight problem will be more complicated than ever if the number of aspirants for championship honors continues to be added to with the same frequency that has characterized the situation during the past year, says Sam Austin of the Police Gazette. Already "Joe" Kennedy, the big Californian, who won a decision over "Gus" Rubin, is being boomed as a future factor in the disposition of titular honors, and a half a dozen self-constructed managers are falling over each other trying to get engagements for him in the east.

California's wise fistic people are also trying to tell us about another heavyweight phenomenon named Jeffords, who is reputed to have done all sorts of things with "Jim" Jeffries in a four-round scrap which took place a short time before the latter came east to fight Fitzsimmons. The details of the alleged affair were written doubtless by some individual who is interested in launching another derelict like "Mike" Morrissey upon the pugilistic sea.

Money in Pool Box. The betting in the 2:19 trot at Cleveland was quite lively while it lasted. Temper was made a favorite, but later Hazel Ridge was a pronounced favorite, selling at $25, Temper $15, Dorothy S $13 and the field $8. There was a great deal of money on this race in the pool box, the Cleveland horsemen backing Temper quite heavily. This promises to be a good betting race before it is finished.

TERRIFIC ROAR Of Death Dealing Galling Gun—Effective Adjunct. The combined roar of all the animals in the Zoological Garden would make a terrifying sound, but would scarcely cause such a feeling of fear as the indescribable rolling, snapping, thundering noise made by a galling gun worked by expert artillerymen. We have all read descriptions of this terrible death-dealing instrument of war, but no conception can be had of it until we have heard it for ourselves. In the battle of San Juan Hill, as presented by Buffalo Bill's Wild West company, the galling gun plays a most important part and its effectiveness as a fighting machine is so clearly demonstrated as to raise up in the minds of the auditors the largest sized and most profound respect.

In its use in the wild west, it takes the same part that was given it in the fighting before Santiago, and it makes more noise and would do more damage to an enemy in five seconds than three hundred infantrymen could do in as many minutes. It is a most effective adjunct to the thrilling truthfulness with which Col. Cody and Mr. Salisbury present this page from our recently made history. But the galling gun, while prominent, is only one of the many details that go to make the scene realistic. Over 300 men are employed, including United States regular and volunteer soldiers, among them a large number of the 10th colored regulars, more than a score of ex-members of Roosevelt's Rough Riders and a hardy band of Cuban patriots. All of these men served under Gen. Shafter and many of them have souvenirs of that campaign in the shape of wounds inflicted by Mauser bullets.
